FOREWORD

In 1934 the Congress established the National Historical Publications Commission to make plans, estimates, and recommendations for the publication of important historical documents. It empowered the Commission to work with various public and private institutions in gathering, annotating, and publishing papers and records of national historical significance.

The Commission was largely inactive until 1950 when, at the urging of President Harry S. Truman, the Congress provided funds for a small professional staff. In the following years the Commission issued reports, suggested topical areas for documentary publication, and promoted editorial projects. In 1964 the program was strengthened by the enactment of Public Law 88-383, authorizing the Commission to make allocations to federal agencies and grants to state and local agencies, as well as to nonprofit organizations and institutions, for collecting, editing, and publishing significant historical documents. A 1974 revision in the law changed the Commission's name to include "and Records" and expanded its functions.

From its beginning, the Commission's grant program has helped attract a broad range of support from foundations and other private donors for its projects. Federal dollars, in fact, have been more than matched by those from institutional sponsors and private sources. Although the Commission is relatively small, both in staff and available funds, its impact is significant.

In addition to funding the editorial work of many documentary editions, the Commission also provides subvention grants to nonprofit presses to help support the actual publication costs of sponsored editions.

The documentary editions listed here represent the efforts of the Commission to carry out its legislative mandate to "cooperate with and encourage appropriate Federal, State, and local agencies and nongovernmental institutions, societies, and individuals in collecting and preserving and, when it considers it desirable, in editing and publishing the papers of outstanding citizens of the United States, and other documents as may be important for an understanding and appreciation of the history of the United States."

Acting Chairman, National Historical Publications and Records Commission

Explanatory Note

Many editions include both a book and a microform component; as these are listed separately, users should check both lists when looking for a particular edition.

The sponsoring institutions follow the editor's name but are not mentioned for a completed project.

INTRODUCTION

As early as 1791 Thomas Jefferson encouraged the preservation of important manuscripts and records "not by vaults and locks which fence them from the public eye and use, in consigning them to the waste of time, but by such a multiplication of copies, as shall place them beyond the reach of accident."

From the days of the American Revolution, when the Continental Congress provided $1,000 for the compilation of historical documents, the federal government has sponsored the publication of documentary editions. Early in the 20th century, when J. Franklin Jameson and others championed the growth of archival institutions throughout the states and worked for the creation of a national archives, they also stressed the need for a historical publications commission in the tradition of those established in Great Britain in 1800, France and Belgium in 1834, and several other countries before 1900.

The National Historical Publications and Records Commission, created with the National Archives in 1934 and first staffed in the 1950s, is a further manifestation of the Archives' mandate for national leadership in the historical field. From the beginning of its documentary program, the Commission has vigorously endorsed and promoted those editions that it believes contribute most fully to an understanding of America's history.

In the half century of its existence, the Commission has encouraged and supported publications that provide the nation with historically significant documents in authoritative editions free from partisan interpretation and based on the most exacting scholarship. Since the publication of the first volume of The Papers of Thomas Jefferson in 1950, the Commission has funded and endorsed more than 250 book and microform editions, including such diverse works as The Papers of George C. Marshall and Freedom: A Documentary History of Emancipation. Together, these projects have produced 504 printed volumes, 7,413 microfilm reels, and 1,847 microfiche. New, exciting areas of documentary history have been opened--projects in black history, in women's history, in the study of ethnic groups, and in the history of art, business, labor, science, politics, and military affairs.

A few years ago, Congressman L. H. Fountain of North Carolina remarked in the House of Representatives that the publication of Commission-sponsored editions has helped keep us in touch with our country's heritage. This publications program, he said, will have an impact "for centuries to come as the priceless documents it has preserved are saved for our children and our children's children to read and study and profit greatly thereby."

In 1976 the Commission issued its first publications catalog, listing all book and microform editions it had supported with funds or by formal endorsement. This list of historical documentary editions is the first revision of that catalog. From scholars writing serious monographs to high school students learning their country's history, these editions are for all Americans. This list will serve as their guide to the riches of the past.

Editor: Frederick S. Allis, Jr.

Publisher: Massachusetts Historical Society

The personal and family papers (1721-1953, but mainly 1775-95) of a Revolutionary War officer and member of the Continental Congress and the House of Representatives. The papers give insight into the military history of the early days of the Revolution before Washington took command, and they include correspondence, business papers, documents relating to Shays' Rebellion, a diary of the Ticonderoga campaign, an orderly book, and the Ward family correspondence to 1953.

5 reels; 30-page guide (1967)

David Bailie Warden Papers

Editor: Bayly Ellen Marks

Publisher: Scholarly Resources, Inc.

The personal papers (1797-1845) of a U.S. consul in Paris (1808-10), author, and book collector. Correspondents include

John Armstrong, Daniel Brent, Albert Gallatin, John Graham, Thomas Jefferson, the Marquis de Lafayette, John Howard Payne, John Rogers, and George Ticknor.

8 reels; 21-page guide (1970)

Henry Clay Warmoth Papers in the Southern Historical Collection of the University of North Carolina Library

Project Director: James W. Patton

Editor: Margaret Lee Neustadt

Publisher: Southern Historical Collection, University of North Carolina Library

The papers (1798-1934) of the Union officer, Reconstruction Governor of Louisiana, plantation owner, and railroad financier. Included are correspondence, diaries, plantation records, and scrapbooks.

22 reels; 21-page guide (1967)

Washington Mill Company Papers, 1857-1888, at the University of Washington Libraries

Project Director: Richard C. Berner

Publisher: University of Washington Libraries

Records of a lumber company and affiliated firms that operated in the Puget Sound and San Francisco Bay areas for three decades. Papers include general correspondence, the correspondence of affiliated companies, business records, and a 75-page scrapbook.

3 reels; 4-page guide (1965)

Washington Territorial Government Papers, 1853-1875, at the University of Washington Libraries

Project Director: Richard C. Berner

Publisher: University of Washington Libraries

Incoming letters of the Governor and the secretary, and outgoing letters of the secretary. There are other record series in this collection that are not included in the microfilm publication, such as legislative journals, acts and bills of the legislature, joint resolutions, and financial records.

1 reel; 3-page guide (1965)

Papers of Daniel Webster

Editor: Charles M. Wiltse

Publisher: University Microfilms International

The papers (1798-1852) of the distinguished lawyer, member of both houses of Congress, and Secretary of State collected in photocopy from many repositories, with correspondence filmed chronologically and business-related documents filmed in a separate chronological sequence. The first roll reproduces an alphabetical card file of writers and recipients of letters other than Webster.

41 reels; 175-page guide (1971)

Papers of Eleazar Wheelock

Project Director: Edward Connery Lathem

Publisher: Dartmouth College Library

The papers (1728-79) of the 18th-century clergyman, a pioneer in the field of Native American education and founder of Dartmouth College. Includes early records of the college, Moor's Indian Charity School, and the town of Hanover in what later became the State of New Hampshire.

16 reels; 297-page guide (1971)

Andrew Dickson White Papers at Cornell University, 1846-1919

Editors: Herbert Finch and Patricia H. Gaffney

Publisher: University Microfilms International

The papers of the first president of Cornell University (1865-85), U.S. Minister to Germany (1878-81) and to Russia (1892-94), and Ambassador to Germany (1897-1902). They include correspondence, diaries, and manuscripts of lectures, speeches, and articles.

149 reels; 81-page guide (1970)

William Wirt Papers

Editor: John B. Boles

Publisher: Scholarly Resources, Inc.

Primarily the personal correspondence (1786-1850) of the author, orator, lawyer, and Attorney General of the United States (1817-29) and his family. Every phase of Wirt's varied career is represented in his personal correspondence. Especially valuable is the detailed portrait of court and government life of the 1820s.

24 reels; 23-page guide (1971)

Papers of the Women's Trade Union League and Its Principal Leaders

Editor: Edward T. James

Publisher: Research Publications, Inc., for the Schlesinger Library, Radcliffe College

The records (1905-50) of the WTUL, its branch in New York, and the papers of its principal leaders: Margaret Drier Robins, Mary Anderson, Leonora O'Reilly, Rose Schneiderman, and Agnes Nestor. Smaller collections in the compilation relate to Mary Kenney O'Sullivan and the Boston and Chicago branches of the League. The documents are drawn from collections in six institutions: the University of Florida Libraries, the Schlesinger Library at Radcliffe College, the New York State Department of Labor Library, Tamiment Library at New York University, Chicago Historical Society, and the University of Illinois at Chicago Circle.

131 reels; 319-page guide (1981)

Benjamin Cudworth Yancey Papers in the Southern Historical Collection of the University of North Carolina Library

Project Director: James W. Patton

Editor: Clyde Edward Pitts

Publisher: Southern Historical Collection, University of North Carolina Library

The personal papers (1800-1931, but mainly 1830-1900) of a Southern planter, lawyer, politician, and U.S. Minister to the Argentine Confederation. Also included are the papers of Yancey's son, Hamilton, and some of the papers of the Hamilton and Patterson families of Georgia. Among the subjects discussed in the papers are cases the elder Yancey handled as a lawyer, local and national political affairs, and military service in Virginia in 1861 and near Atlanta in 1864.

16 reels; 13-page guide (1967)
